Description:

Our bush is an asset ALL Australians own and have access to. Locking out majority of bush users is short sighted and will be a crippling blow to the small communities that rely on the money brought into town by bush users. Claiming National Parks will bring in more tourism is just not true, I spend most weekends out in the bush and never once have I met someone out there as an "Eco Tourist" Every person I have met was in the bush to pursue there hobby of choice, al of which they will not be able to do under your plan. I have been a keen detectorist for 2 years and am very conscious of how I treat the bush. Myself and other hobbyists are your eyes out in the bush, report illegal dumping, which will always happen, and collect rubbish to bring home. In all my time in the bush I have only seen Parks twice, I am doing way more to protect the bush than they are. Locking hobbyists out is reducing the care, policing and usage of our great bush. Please reconsider the access restrictions you are placing on bush users.
