Description:

Access to the Victorian bushland is one of the things that makes the State we live in so enjoyable. Don't take this access away, as future generations deserve the same right to enjoy what Victoria's bush has to offer. Restricting access will have a negative economic impact on the surrounding communities, who rely on the business injected into the area by those who come to enjoy what the bush has to offer. This will have a flow-on affect and will impact the whole State. We would likely see a growth in the feral animal population, and a higher frequency (and intensity) of wildfires. Not only will the native animals and flora suffer from this, there will be a greater risk to life. Management seems to be the key, not the closure and restriction of access. Don't change things for the worse.
